A1	Played and Supported by Luke Slater, . AnD, Cedrik, Marcel Dettmann, Inigo Kennedy, Norman Nodge, Dadub, Conrad Van Orton, Audio Injection and more. Timber-seeking and testing are the key for ANG, a label engaged in a large range of electronic music. This label wants to transmit the direct action of sound on the soul. Composition comes into contact with the soul and establishes the resonance. A label that can't be described simply by being ambient, but surely it is a label with music suspended between abstraction and representation, a synthesis of external vision and internal contemplation. A long journey called ANG' This was the presentation of the concept when Gianluca Angelini began his digital label. The time is past and the love for electronic music, his background, and feedback from many great artists... made sure that ANG born Vinyl. And here we are. The first vinyl ANG is completely electronic music (as always has been)! The label's owner shows three tracks. In the A side, 'Sound P.Q.R.' is a reminder to all that influenced the musical life of the artist. Rhythmic breaks. Hypnotic sounds like a battle game

A1 A2 A3 B1 B2 C1 C2 D1 D2 D3	Looking back on a wide array of releases, it is safe to say that 2015 has been a great year for Dynamic Reflection. So it was only natural to set the aim even higher for 2016, beginning with the long awaited return of Abstract Division to their native imprint, by the release of their first ever double EP: Contemporary Spaces. Always being credited as great storytellers in both their music and DJ-sets, exploring the format of a truly extended play seemed like a logical progression from Abstract Division's work until now. Not set out to be an album, but certainly being more than just an EP, Contemporary Spaces explores the current state of techno, providing the listener with wayward and timeless pieces drawing their inspiration from the broad spectrum of electronic music. Yet, while each individual track stands in its own place and time within this spectrum, the EP as a whole compliments the diversity of past, present and future influences and styles. Contemporary Spaces is one of their most extensive and widely aimed projects to date and solely consists of original material. It is released as a limited double 12inch, pressed on lush white vinyl!

"While exploring new production techniques using old and unlikely hardware, the results were so unusual that I really had the sense that these pieces of equipment didn't actually create these sounds, rather they were in fact some kind of elaborate reception device that allowed me to tune into transmissions from Distant Galaxies. The music I could hear was actually the received transmissions of Pop Hits from those Distant Galaxies that were being played on their radio stations. I quickly recorded all that I could before losing the transmission. I consulted with Dr Andrew Read, the astrophysicist with whom I recorded Guitar Treatments in 1999. He has worked on the discovery of the most distant galaxies and astronomical objects in the Universe. Together we came up with a possible list of where these musical transmissions may have come from."

A1	We are very glad to welcome Mr. Lewis Fautzi to our team of producers. After having been part of our booking roster for a year, now it's time for this promising Portuguese producer to get physical on vinyl. Blood EP comprises two original tracks plus remixes by our very own duo Exium and our man Kwartz. Four slices of futuristic, spacey, hypnotic techno, starting with 'Blood'. All the elements of this track are present from the beginning: synthetic bleeps, profound sub bass frequencies and percussive elements that come in and out of the arrangement subtly. Less than five minutes of mental therapy, and also a fabulous mixing tool. Exium reinforces 'Blood', darkening the bleeps and modifying them, adding a fatter kick and a more dynamic arrangement. On the B side, 'Skin' keeps the continuous sequences and a strong kick drum as a starting point, slowly adding hats and subtle drones that grow until taking more and more sonic frequencies. Hard and mental at the same time, it will explore the hidden territories of your mind, if played on the proper sound system

This label has principal goal to reach a new experience at Techno music and show a new perspective using raw techno elements, heavy basslines and 909 groove. Second release from Relapso Records where the host brings new fresh Techno in its own way, using a real 909 groove and raw mood in the sounds. This pack brings great remixes from the Japanese well known Go Hiyama where he shapes the Motion sentiments in his own style and the other remix is from a newcomer in Techno scene the Portuguese Alfred Kopke where he takes the Unmotion track and makes it his own atmospheric and hypnotic style like he loves to do it! It's all about feeling and getting in the spirit of Relapso sounds in this release! Third release from Relapso Records where the host brings new fresh Techno to the floor. Brings new fashion old 909 beats to this world from mirage and hunted conquerors. This pack has also two great remixes from the masters Brendon Moeller and Lori, where they show their talent in how to kill a dancefloor with great grooves and beats

In the past two decades, Slam have defined techno in Scotland, cultivated many artists of through Soma and remixed everyone from Josh Wink & Paul Ritch to Daft Punk & Underworld. The legendary UK duo, comprising of Stuart McMillan and Orde Meikle, have travelled far and wide, leaving scorch marks on dance-floors across the planet, touring Europe, Australia, the USA, South America and Asia. They hold residencies at 3 of the UK's best clubs (Pressure & Sub Club in their home town of Glasgow and Fabric in London). Slam are currently on top of their game at the moment as they work toward the release of their new album, due in 2014 and this latest EP from the prolific Scottish duo shows they intend to keep up their furious momentum

A1	Tresor Records is fortunate enough to be sitting on a catalogue of past releases that no other label in electronic music would turn down. Three of the finest in this collection were contributed by Surgeon; 'Basictonalvocabulary', 'Balance' and 'Force + Form' all originally came out on the Berlin institution between 1997 and 1999. Surgeon's inimitable combination of Detroit techno and post-industrial sounds emanating from his British homeland found its fullest expression in these masterful trio of releases on Tresor. Tresor Records have decided that its high time to give these seminal albums another airing, and will present each in a staggered series of 2LP represses throughout the year. 'Force + Form' is the last chapter of this re-issue series, centered around Surgeon and represents a turn- ing point both in the artist's career as well as for the history of techno music. Tresor.117 was remastered in 2015 by Matt Colton at Alchemy Mastering, London

	WARM UP	KWARTZ - RITE EP (OSCAR MULERO RMX)	10.20 €
	WU043		12"
	TECHNO		Lanzamiento: 04 - Diciembre - 2015 ESP
A1	This is the first solo work by Kwartz released by the Warm Up imprint. A vinyl four-tracker and an extended seven track EP as its digital counterpart. The young Spanish talent displays all his production skills in this release that opens with the compact kick drums and arpeggiated madness of "Rite", spiced with sweeps and drones that interweave with the hypnotic arrangement. In his first rework, Oscar Mulero reduces the bass drum punch, twists the arpeggiated synth line with reverb and early reflections, and adds an overall guerrilla feel to the sound. Next up is "Remix B", also by Oscar. This is a less aggressive version, more for building a set. The elements appear slowly, with flanged synth lines as principal motif. "Black Horse" starts with an ambient mood, till the industrial groove comes in and creates a mixture of meditation and aggression that grows and grows to utter madness. "Unknown territories" contains part of the mood felt in "Rite", although this time the sequence is more FM bell-like and the drums are less aggressive, mental and deep
