A1 > elsewhere "As One" A2 > new brand design "Sensurreal (As One mx)" B1 > solina "Jedi Knights (As One mx)"	The Belgian party organisation and record label De:tuned mark their 10th anniversary with the first outing of their 10 x 12" series. 'DE:10.01' kicks off with a special treat from the 90s golden era: an offer a welcome combination of previously unreleased DAT material by Kirk Degiorgio and expertly affectionate As One remix treatments of both original Sensurreal and Jedi Knights (Mark Pritchard and Tom Middleton) work, pure bliss. The artwork of the first 9 collectable releases of the series forms a 3 x 3 poster display. De:tuned have called on designer Kevin Foakes (Openmind, DJ Food, Ninja Tune) to create all graphic work. This kickstarter for the series is mastered by Matt Colton (Alchemy Mastering) and pressed on 180 gr vinyl. A separate digital version of every release will be available from the usual digital shops. Stay tuned!

Ruud Lekx, with his wife Shaunna on vocals, returns to Bordello A Parigi. Following The Kill and From Ritual to Reason, Rude 66 delivers Resurrection; a four tracker brimming with his trademark touch. The title piece is a devilish vocoder incantation. Beats bite as Shaunna's thickly modulated voice rasps through bending distortion that bears the unmistakable 66 mark. Lyrics are sidelined for ?The Curse?. Drum and dreamscape combine in this synthesizer spell, blackened shades blending with light tones in this heady brew. This balance is something Lekx achieves time and again in his productions. He once more finds this sense of equilibrium with the stained disco darkness of ?The Sleepers?. Lurking, stalking, the track counters an innocent playful melody with undercurrents that throb with menace. That menace comes to the fore with ?The Luciferians?. A bare anthem of anti pop, a celebration of prowling, murderous intent plays to steady pulse and stripped melody. Brooding brilliance from a master of dutch electronics

Glueped is the joint production of the two Romanian artists—Melodie & Teluric. They have merged their musical understandings into a new sound, which combines both mystical harmonies and elemental grooves. Peren is the third vinyl featuring Glueped, released in April 2020. This vinyl emphasizes the contemporary underground scene vibes while offering a glimpse of the forthcoming sound of Cinetic Art record label. The sounds of Peren have the capacity to take the listeners on celestial journeys, and also make them feel rooted and present in this world. Its essence is in the frail aspect of time, that can be sensed through music. Side A debuts with a playful tempo intertwined with a deep and experimental groove. The two tracks bring a melodic touch to modern minimal and give an evolving sense of energy. Side B has a consistent approach, giving a more solid shape to sound, emphasizing dreamy waves of music

Praetorium sets off to probe and explore the boundaries of what music can still be. Withstanding the usual trends and expectations of the scene and cheerfully doing so, we invite you to lend your ears to Modest Ionescu, a lesser known moniker of a dear friend of ours. An authentic artist album in the truest sense, "Nori de Praf" LP is themed around spacious and precise design, gentle harmonies and narrative complexity. Finding it difficult to explain it ourselves, we'll let you decide what it is and what it isn't. Vinyl only

Part 1 of a Trilogy inspired by Belgium Dance Music from early/mid 1990s till early 2000. Produced by Thomas Blanckaer aka Innershades under his new alter Ego 'Emotive Response'. Belgium Trance was at its commercial peak during those years and while Dj's showcased their skills on national television (TMF!), a new group of producers stood up injecting the lively scene with big tunes. The often dramatic and dark melodies that defined their typical sound can be found again in the four club bangers collected on this first EP. All containing that energetic and uplifting sound from those days, but with a an own twist from the man Innershades. Limited edition of 250 copies, Strictly vinyl only!

Some serious hot tracks on this fourth instalment of the Scandinavian Swords series. It breaks with its predecessors' forms. Deviating from the austere brevity that marks Northern Electronics out, Scandinavian Swords III: Atlas of Visions completes a survey of the label's confidants and components in the same breath as it introduces a swarm of new artists and genre-collisions. With the swell of the last 12 months behind them, Anthony Linell and Jonas Ronnberg have forged the compilation with a paradoxical formula: Atlas of Visions stakes itself as a milestone release that retains the sure-footed programming of its proprietors yet cuts a new silhouette for what the platform of a Northern Electronics release consists of. Presented across two volumes, Atlas of Visions courses through the hyper-pigmented and infectious fallout zone between club-focused works and the abstract territories of experimental modes. The release compiles egression and intensification into a pandemoniac whole, a refracting design for fractured times. Recommended!!!

Adamant Scream back on PRSPCT XTRM with her 2nd Vinyl EP. We would like to write an amazing funny as fuck promo text again but were simply not in the mood. This whole Corona thing is one massive mood killer isn't it? Like the ultimate No Fun Virus! At least most people with HIV for instance had a ton of fun while contracting the disease. With Corona however there is no fun part anywhere from start till finish which makes it way worse + putting on one massive condom still won't allow you to go out raving. Shift is fucked pff... Ok, well, on to the promo text we go: Adamant Scream's brand new 4-tracker contains everything great about Industrial Hardcore. Proving once again that there actually is a movement working hard to "make hardcore great again". Malin Kolbrink is one talented producer and this EP proves that. Sure she might be a woman but here at PRSPCT we don't give a fuck about what your downstairs mix-up situation is. All we care about is how banging your tracks are and damn these 4 tracks are BANGING! 75% solo tracks + 25% collab with Thrasher = 1000% awesome

After his "Distrophism" and "Sinua" EP's, Viels became a close member of the Dynamic Reflection family. This multitalent showed that he's here to stay and will bring us a lot more in the future. Meanwhile other respected labels as Semantica & Non Series confirmed this by releasing his music as well. With his intelligent trippy driving techno sound he delivers yet another 5 track EP (of which 4 appear on this vinyl) called "Pure Coincidence EP" including a hypnotising Neel remix

R&S teams up with Spanish producer Architectural AKA Juan Rico for two tracks of hypnotic machine funk 'This Is Not Purple' / Rhythms & Souls' The Catalanian-based Asturian creator combines techno classicism with a rich strain of cinematic influences, recording as both Architectural and Reeko he has spent his career flitting between releases built for peak-time warehouse techno and introspective headphone psychouts. For his R&S debut, Rico dips into science fiction as his core inspiration - A-side 'This Is Not Purple' snakes it's way around a snappy, stripped down but hi-tech groove that builds and builds. On the flip, 'Rhythms & Souls' amps a similarly tight drum track with a thumping DMX snare and pistoning kick drums, laced with seething pads and percolating percussion. Drawing on the idea of an alternative civilization, Rico describes: "another cosmos with a retrofuturist aesthetic where a fusion between techno and funk is heard." Neat parallels can be drawn with Cybotron's planetary funk or the aquatic adventures of Drexciya - however Rico manages to make the sound his own

- B2 > the next screen is death

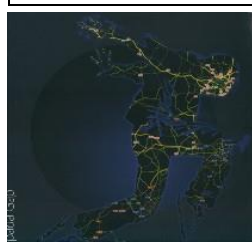

Tresor Records is pleased to welcome Minimal Violence to the label, starting with the first chapter in a series of three records entitled DESTROY --> [physical] REALITY [psychic] <-- TRUST to be released during the next 12 months. At the furthest edges of their idiosyncratic brand of ferocious hardware techno, this first EP, Phase One, reveals the Vancouver duo to be expertly out on a limb. Mirroring the explosive cut and thrust of their live sets, their recorded output extends a metaphysical rave. Throughout, Ash Luk and Lida P cut their cinematic melodies into a clattering rave hole, unceasingly revising the gravitational pull in each direction. Ravebomb finds a route of no-nonsense with its untinged endorphin rush of surging EBM style bass and rough-handed rhythms. It is followed up by an alternate version of Ravebomb, the Fire Mix, which casts its elements into a heady psychoactive cloud on a collision course with its kick drum. Glimpses of a rhythmic waywardness coat Perfect Rendition, full of tape fics and wobble, with a push to 90s UK, beat experimentations and the pull of arching hookworms

Jamie Roberts is no stranger to the more experimental tenets of the Techno genre, and much of the British artist's output of late has hinted at more leftfield leanings. A recent return to Will Bankhead's Trilogy Tapes imprint saw a brace of meditative, post-Detroit workouts - employing the same heady, hardware aesthetic as much of his work on Temesc - though at a drastically reduced tempo. It's this same willingness to break down perceptions regarding his own music that marks Walk Type - Roberts' debut on the Avian label, as a notable chapter in the artist's discography. In terms of aesthetic finish, AVN027 might be Roberts' most comprehensive and well articulated ode to the culture of machine music - but it's also his most organic offering. Corroded drones provide the basis for much of the material, pitching & bending at will - shifting & warping in and amongst furtive drum work, that by and large sits uncharacteristically deep in the mix. For the most part the record eschews traditional dance floor functionality in favour of this rich, experimental premise

Variations on Memory is an ongoing project by Max Schreiber, who records Memorial day songs intuitively, the way they were carved in his own memory. Schreiber takes the national memory to the most personal place and creates his own interpretations of the classic songs. The songs are usually recorded in one session. The final outcome, with its off-keys and inaccuracies, gives a new meaning to these memorial songs, and formulates imaginative soundtracks to Hebrew horror movies

Across the EP, Nicky ventures between parameters of ambient electronica and big, bad club tracks. Nicky's outsider sound find it's perfect home on London's GETME! label, both artist and label undefinable by genre, shape or sound. A-Side 'I Can't Really Explain (It)' is a straight call for the dance floor for those after sounds on a more house and garage tip. Originally trained as a drummer, Nicky's percussive talent shines across this bossy number, complete with creeping melody and layered vocal samples for a track nodding to club edits from a nostalgic time gone by. Moving into murkier territories, B-Side 'Sketch Original Slow' is journey through the darker strains of electronica, hazy techno feels and euphoric ambient vibes. Dreamy melodies and carefully mapped out drum patterns meet here, giving 'Sketch Original Slow' an other-worldly feel

A1 > bad education (vocal) B1 > bad education (instrumental)	Bad Education is a soulful heater that will shake your hips and your social consciousness. Inspired by the afro-latin soul blends from the likes of Joe Bataan and Ray Barreto, this collaboration between Timmion Records and Yemayá Sol Records - brainchild of Bardo Martinez (lead singer of Chicano Batman), makes a statement. The horn laden groove will transport the listener to a summer in New York. The memorable flute line by Ernie Hawks is flavorfully funky while the pulsating tumbao of the conga carries the vitality of a Nuyorican neighborhood in full effect. The force of the rhythm section provides the vehicle by which Martinez lays down a fiery indictment of educational institutions, defining them as a mouthpiece to the military industrial complex. The music and the message flow together in a very classic sense, packing a punch that gives it to the man, necessary now more than ever!		Release: 11 - August - 2017 FIN

You know we are in for a treat when Luke Vibert, exponent of electronic beats and breaks since the dawn of rave, delivers not one, not two, but three new album projects, each with a specific musical theme and thread. A set of three long players, collect them all like bubble gum stickers and annoy your neighbours by playing at high volume! Vibert's previous album projects for Hypercolour, both as Kerrier District, and under his own name, have always excelled, not to mention his groundbreaking and brain scrambling long players for Warp, Rephlex, Rising High Records, Planet Mu and Ninja Tune. Vibert revives his Amen Andrews moniker after over a decade lying dormant. Squarely aiming the sound at the 'Amen break', Luke Vibert presents Amen Andrews? brings together 14 slabs of raucous breakbeat bangers, riddled with cool as fuck samples and bass bin shattering sub!

Part two in his trilogy of what seems like an aural romp through dance music's key components, Luke Vibert follows up his ode to the 'Amen break' on the sumptuous 'Luke Vibert presents Amen Andrews?', with a pretty damn thorough modelling of rave roots, in 'Luke Vibert presents Modern Rave?'. When it comes to bashing out creative, highly complex, yet seemingly simplistic rave bangers, Luke Vibert certainly has the chops for delivering the goods in spades. As an innovator in the field for labels like Ninja Tune, Warp and Rephlex, Vibert digs deep into his floppy disc collection for a glorious ride through familiar samples and hooks, breakbeats and funky basslines and earworm melodies for an indispensable collection of feel good modern rave

The third, and final part, of Luke Vibert's entertaining and infectious cavort through some of dance music's key motifs, delivers a singular collection of tracks that the creator defines as Rave Hop. 'Luke Vibert presents Rave Hop?' finds the British producer and musical trail blazer kick back on a bunch of lazy hip hop breaks and breezy samples. Soulful vocals, suave raps and buoyant riffs are expertly infused with dope as fuck beats and booming basslines. 'Rave Hop?' concludes Vibert's trilogy of albums for Hypercolour that has gifted us absorbing musical dispatches from the breakbeat and rave frontlines. With an enviable recording career that has taken in countless projects for labels like Ninja Tune, Warp, Planet Mu and Rephlex, Luke Vibert still holds the crown for king of the beats

Donnerstag. In German, day of Thor, the Scandinavian god of Thunder, where the strength of this curious EP lies. This vinyl travels along a path of different textures of sound and style. Starting with Mirnha's -the label's founder-dancefloor techno to open a second door to Omar Amo's -AKA Magoo- groovy techno. The B side delights us with touches of excellent acid by Diego Cid (ARG). Both artists are members of the notorious group "Urban Groove", which has edited in solid labels such as Kumquat Records, Illegal Alien Records, Beathey Recordings, among others. The disc tops off with progressive techno in charge of Lucas Vazz (CL) -Inherencia's resident- impregnated with fine and cosmic Berliner sounds

A1 > the non assay sound of the underground	Reemerging from the threshold of the cosmic vortex, Black Lodge returns with another sonic artifact that is charged with vigorous chaotic energy, known as EXPERIMENT_ZERO. Accounts of the radiant object's origin are as mysterious as the raw energy that utters from its core. Following a close study, the guardians of the portal suspect that "Experiment Zero" was a primordial experiment rooted in the slam jack pits and DIY warehouse rituals of ages passed. A sonic dialog constructed of various languages, spanning from roots-house jak to bare-knuckled electro are revealed across the artifact - a revolutionary tale that surpasses the constructs of ephemerality, with a refusal to be ignored. Across the release the listener is confronted with fearless acid lines that are underscored by a tone of revolution, and sets the stage for a human voice that switches between modes of a sharp and mutated presence. The power of such sonic objects are both celebrated and rejected by various tribal societies. It is all dependent on the belief structures and traditional histories of its members
