Orlando Voom's musical output goes from strength to strength with each new release showing the Dutch musician flex his producer muscles in new and stronger forms. His trademark sound, a brilliant mixture of Detroit influence and Dutch modernism, is thoughtfully crafted with the dancefloor centrally placed in his musical mind. Mr. Voom's latest venture arrives in the form of the 'Dirty Rules Crew,' a collaborative effort for Elypsia Records which is absolutely impossible to resist, and guaranteed to smash the club to pieces. Kicking off the release comes the Christian Bonori remix of 'Dirty Rules.' The Italian producer / DJ wastes no time getting things going with a tough-as-nails kick drum and sharp, moody synth stabs. The energy grows stronger with each passing phrase, with additional percussion, vocal samples and textures placed strategically, pushing the tune towards it's boiling point. Orlando Voom's version of 'Dirty Rules' is a captivating cut centered around a relentless and powerful percussive groove which confidently captures Orlando's ability to combine true late-night mayhem with well calibrated patience. The vocal samples flow in and out of consciousness whilst loopy synth melodies construct a hypnotic atmosphere brilliantly. Diving into more submerged territory is the final version of 'Dirty Rules;', credited as the 'Deeptech Mix' for clear reasons. Saturated textures, repetitive vocal samples and a heavy use of reverb all result in a perfectly murky heads-down dancefloor experience. True afterhours power for those who can handle going below the surface into deeper musical territories

Black Vinyl   Printed Innersleeve
A1 > ben-hur	Standard black vinyl version in printed innersleeve. Ghent based psych jazz collective Compro Oro, are set to release new album 'Buy The Dip' on the 2nd September via the groove-obsessed Saban Ultra label. Having received critical acclaim for their 2020 album 'Simurg' - a collaboration with Murat Ertel, co-founder and frontman of Istanbul's cult psychedelic folk band BaBa ZuLa and his singer partner Esma Ertel - the band's fifth album is less ethno- and more techno-logy, both on a musical and conceptual level. With tastemaker fans including BBC 6 Music's Gilles Peterson and Stuart Maconie alongside Jazz FM's Jez Nelson, the band's spontaneous quest for psychedelic sounds and jazz grooves has not stopped expanding since their formation in 2014. After imaginative musical trips to Havana, Mogadishu and Istanbul for previous releases, Compro Oro went looking for sounds and inspirations from other corners of the globe for 'Buy The Dip'. Synthesizers and electronic effects spice up Compro Oro's distinctive musical marriage of vibraphones, electric guitars, jazzfunk rhythms, exotic percussions and dubby bass patterns. Band leader and composer Wim Segers created these new compositions often on piano or vibes in a more analogue way, leaving enough room for his band mates to colour each track when fine tuning the song. Segers was inspired by the world of crypto markets and the specific concept of 'buying the dip': bitcoin diggers who play the markets at specific 'low' moments to gain higher profits when prices go up again. Are we all reduced to consuming creatures, seeking for nothing more than the thrill of pointless spending and endless profits? It's a fairly philosophical question - especially for an instrumental album - but it's key for the punchy and eclectic sounds on 'Ben Hur' and 'Bitcoins'. Apart from those synths and fx, a fair bunch of neo-noir western vibes sprout up on this album as well - think detuned piano's, flamenco-like guitars, rattling snare drums, and imminent whistles. Add to that some laid back sunny pop sounds ('Kayak'), off-hook and swaying Turkish psychedelica ('Karsilama') and even some haunted, kraut-ish vocal parts ('Dungeon'), it's evident Compro Oro has a musical voice without any equal in Belgium and beyond. Compro Oro released their first album 'Transatlantic' in 2015, an ode to jazz vibraphonist Cal Tjader, an icon of the 1950's Latin jazz movement. The release received critical acclaim back home, lauded in the press as a drunken mix of Buena Vista Social Club and guitarist Marc Ribot's, Cubanos Postizos. Subsequent live shows have been called a celebration for the hips, the ear and the soul. 2017 saw the release of 'Bombarda', a bold EP that sailed South and East of Cuba, incorporating different ethnic rhythms and melodies in elaborate jams. No palm trees and cocktails in Havana this time, but instead dingy basements and LSD in West African cities. The critically acclaimed 'Suburban Exotica' followed in 2019 with 'Simurg', released in 2020, earning

It's purpose was to make records that could save a night or a mix. Records that melted the eras, the places. Records for which people would always ask TRACK ID? Records contrived in the floor for the floor. And I'm pretty sure that we are accomplishing this purpose. As hardcore pop culture admirers, this is our contribution to it. Proudly introducing: HARD POP. You know this name better than you think, but we love to twist it. Not Yet delivers a full force mechanical techno avalanche extracting the code from pioneers of the style such as Glen Wilson or Chris Liebing. On the follow, one of our most amazing recent discoveries, Sue Lewig brings tripping techno to the next level. What seems to be a mental track switches into a quasi industrial dance floor opera. Not suitable for purist. The first but not the last on KAOS. Flip the record to find the New Zealand legend, Keepsakes. Finger zaps on the 2 and the 4, primitive as a Neanderthal, here the shamanic effort our deal fella living in the other side of the planet and owner from HAVEN. To finalise the issue, one of the upcoming Spanish prodigy producers, NotAHeadliner has studied the 2000's era as if he would have worked in the golden days of The Record Loft. Bringing the spice of funk in the continuous fashion from our label to embrace the iconic sound. With this 12 issue we are further than I ever have thought, appreciate your continuous support. This is what we love to do." OFTEN PLUS NEVER MINUS +8

Releases and remixes have followed on Dansu Discs, Mad Decent and CLUB GLOW (where she produced a collaborative EP with rising artist Kessler), and now the Aussie producer readies her Lobster Theremin debut; six varied and stylistic cuts of techno, electro and distinct Sports-rave. 'Dial Up' is a pirate radio inspired, scattered break warper that captures an underground, empty warehouse energy. Flashes of bright, coloured lasers enter the fray on 'You Want Some' - an uplifting, happy-hardcore influenced cut of breakbeat-techno - before the progressive, bubbling patterns of 'Listen Now' deepen the undercurrents. The B-side opens with 'Odorimashoul' - a lo-fi industrial experiment laced with trance and jack-hammer melodies - while 'Twin Flame' switches the vibe again with it's high-speed, malfunctioning electro aesthetic. Bringing Displaced to an end is 'The Humans Are Dead' - a dystopian trip through a Fallout-like apocalypse soundtracked by 80s horror styled melodies and futuristic laser blasts

A1 > my heart still leans on you	Singer/songwriter Miller Blue teams up with the lo-fi house maestro Laurence Guy to create the sublime glistening cut "Everything is Everything", serving as a first taste from their upcoming EP "My Heart Still Leans on You". Released via the ever excellent Shall Not Fade, this "after-hour aux cable anthem", encapsulates both the end and the beginning of a nostalgia supercharged journey. In Laurence's own words "this song came together with no time to spare, right at the end of a studio session... within an hour of jamming to my instrumental, Miller had both written and recorded the whole song, had everyone dancing around the room with their jaws on the floor." "Everything is Everything" is a true testament to the pairs artistic abilities and establishes this team as a potent creative force to be reckoned with. Both already seasoned artists, they have captivated millions of fans all around the world, amassing over 64,000,000 streams on Spotify alone and extensive coverage in publications such as COMPLEX, BBC Radio, Clash and COLORS. Along with print and radio support they have been championed by countless tastemakers, artists and editorial playlists including New Music Fridays, Brainfood and Lofi House

With different releases and appearances on prestigious labels such as Token Records, Non Series, VOLTAGE Imprint & Float Records, his young career is taking shape. Altinbas now inaugurates his very own label "Observer Station", a secondary output for his exploratory creations. "The idea of releasing music without any external constraints has always been so appealing to me. As a producer, DJ and music lover I have always been curious and open to listen, understand and try my hands on alternative sides of electronic music. Along the way I've collected a number of tracks I really like, that are a crossbreed between what I usually make and those adventurous sessions. And this imprint will be my way of sharing these tracks with everyone"

A1 > forced inward	Sciamia's debut 12" for Auxiliary comes after four hugely successful cassette album releases over the past few years. Myriad collates four impressive beat-heavy tracks from Michael, spanning multiple genres and tempos. Forced Inward starts proceedings by setting an ominous tone, before erupting into bass tones and soft percussive kicks. The beauty is revealed once the melodies take centre stage. Observe takes things on a more schizoid trip, with its anxious percussion and moody synth tones swelling against the frenetic pulsing kicks. The Lost Pleiad sees Sciamia back in contemplative nature, while steadily raising the tempo and energy before Indignation seals off the EP with more brooding textural synth and bass-stabs. Myriad is an EP you will not want to miss, and ticks all the boxes for what Auxiliary is about as a label

BREAKS 'N' PIECES	SAGE DE LESTROGEN - FEMME FATALE EP	13.75 €
BRKN021		12"
BREAKS / 2STEP / HOUSE / GARAGE	Release: 12 - August - 2022	GBR

A1 > slippy bxtch	Following appearances on London's Threads Radio, Balamii and Lobster Theremin's own Rinse FM show, in addition to contributions to Juke Bounce Werk's JBDUBZ Vol. 9 and a recent release on Leeds based Gimme A Break Records, LA based DJ Introspekt prepares to be welcomed into the Breaks N Pieces family under a brand new alias. Pulling inspiration from the UK-laden worlds of UKG, jungle and dubstep, Sage de Lestrogen has conjured up four killer cuts of heavyweight bass-pressure brimming with skippy riddims, chunky low-ends and low-ceiling energy. 'Slippy Bxtch' walks the line between melodic and lairy; a seemingly sun-kissed cut of 2-step quickly evolves into a sludging sequence of large wubs and gun-finger aesthetics. The tempo is raised ever so slightly on 'Femme Fatale', a jungle influence distinctively noticeable above the crisp percussion that highlights this as a certified stepper. 'Tough Technician' makes use of a familiar vocal-sample twisted into a love triangle between warehouse rave, breakbeat and the future-facing sounds heard at FWD&gt;&gt;, before 'System Test Dub' abandons the dark energy in favour of a bubbling cut of dubbed-out house-garage

A1 > flight six six six	Dutch DJ / producer Coco Bryce makes his anticipated return to Lobster Theremin with another stellar EP of breakbeat-heavy jungle goodness. Hailing from Breda, Netherlands Coco Bryce is an artist who cemented his way into every vinyl lovers bag over the past few years, time and time again delivering killer records with his own unique take on jungle and breakbeat. Bryce's sound blends classic jungle breaks with dreamy synth patterns and clever sampling creating a truly original signature take on the genre. At once old school yet so achingly fresh and exciting

I don't like putting the pressure of making an album on my shoulders before I start making music. When the idea of the album was born, I approached it like a label would; listening to the music I've been making recently, seeing what makes sense together. That ended up being natural for me, capturing a snapshot in time of my musical journey." Silkie 2021

Ams' career is on a steep uphill trajectory. On her second ever release, the producer and 1020 resident's French heritage is palpable. Having grown up on a strict diet of 90's house, she breathes its influence into her buoyant house productions, here translating as infectious grooves, sultry vocals, and disco inflections. On hand to offer remix duties is fellow French artist and SNF family member THEOS who injects his jazz influences into "Alderbaran". Eden EP drops 2nd September via Shall Not Fade
